Al n put to bed at 9 o'clock, to-night was going to a great ball, sho ed them to stay up with Annie un-10 and Annie had told story after ry until she was out of breath and the little Margaret was now sweet begged for one more, just one more when Annie was a little gir and had her own sweet parents to love her, which though they had heard it a hundred times, never grew stale to And so Annie started for the lolst time on the story of her life.

when I was a little girl, said Annie, "I lived in a beautiful big. ght room, away up at the top of a high ullding down town. I don't know exwhere it was, but I heard a lady who once came to sit for father, call it a 'studio.' I didn't know then what a studio meant, but I know now it means dace where artists paint and draw autiful pletures. You know, children father was an artist, 'Gay Ned Carrollhis friends called him, (that is who you are named for, Ned, dear) and he any pictures of a beautiful lady ers, who looked like ar me; father once told me that er seen, but whom he said had to live with the angels long but that was a happy life in reat, big sunny room, with my lit-orden curtained off at the lower here father came every evening me in his arms and to tell me for mother. I think it must be heaven. There were so many emen who came to see father wives, and there were the ladies who came to sit for father sit the pictures their husbands had hourt to father, was who called me his little and swore he would marry nit to do it. Uncle Archie came to very day and sometimes he ld try to draw or paint, but more on the bounge, talking of what ne was going to do some day and of the great fortune he was going to make in Father generally listened humorodly, but sometimes he gay a dissensed grunt and said: 'When repented, for he loved Archithe bottom of his true and tender

He put on his hat and coat, leaving Archie and me in the stodio to attend to his business for a blug to be home at 5. Five o'clock, Er, seven, eight and nine passed, but don't come and finally Uncle dehis insisted on my going to bed. I but could not go to sleep, and frany about 11 o'clock, father came, in excited, with hat and coat on but wrenthed in happy smiles. ab. Arch! he cried; 'Tve got he order for Lincoln and the Eman-Proclamation, which is to go the World's Fair and which is the grandest contract of the year. No one and I must work in secret, but

"The next day father started on the picture and for days and days and months after that we never saw him except early in the morning and late at night, and Uncle Archie and I were continually together, as he rarely ever left the studio nowadays, but he had greatly changed in the last few months; either a settled fixed purpose had come into his life or he was great-ly dissatisfied with himself and his ways. He was no longer the old, jolly Archie, the boy of nineteen, but had lost his mirth and joliity in a few short weeks and seemed now a care-worn man of thirty-five. Father was too busy to see it and as I was such a child I only noticed that he had no longer the pleasant word and hearty, ringing laugh which were his birthright. Father had not yet had a chance to take Archie to the capital with him, as the room in which he worked was known only to the President and the keeper at the door, for there had been a valuable painting stolen from the gallery not long before and extra pre-cautions were being taken with this great masterpiece. One day, however father came home and told Uncle Archie that he thought he had a good chance to let him see the picture the next day as the door-keeper was sick and they thought they did not need to replace him for a few days at least. He was not to tell any one, on any condi tion, about the picture. Archie prom ised, and bright and early the morning they started out, leaving me sione in the studio. After a long day they came home in the evening, father very tired, as usual, from his work, and Uncle Archie with his old, gay, joyous manner come back once more. After a cosy little studio tea. Uncle Archie begged us to excuse him, as he had an engagement with a young friend. This was so unusual that we were somewhat surprised, but as father said nothing. I was silent also, and Archie departed in peace. sweetly until the next morning, not knowing that this was perhaps the most eventful night of my life. Father woke me up early, saying Uncle Archie studio. Just as he was speaking there came a most awful knocking at the door and father went to open it. There stood a most formidable looking party, composed of the door-keeper of the whits house, two or three policemen, and the sheriff. The sheriff stepped forward, saying: 'Mr. Carrollton, I re-gret it exceedingly, but I must arrest you in the name of the law, 'Arrest!' The word fell on my car with a shockmy father arrested! I stepped forward and said: 'Please, sir, he is my father, and you must not arrest him.' 'I can't help it, little girl, but he has stolen a picture at the capital. He is the only one who knew where it was kept, and it was stolen last night.' Father and it was stolen last night. Father said nothing to the officers, but turning to me, said: "Never mind, little girl; go down to Mrs Nicklin's below and father will be home this evening; and saying this he went out with the men. Well, I would not go down to Mrs. Nicklin's, but stayed in the studio all day, crying in the window seat, wondering when Uncle Archie or father would come home. But Uncle Archie never came back and after two days name and held me there a long time, and then he told me that I must go to Aunt Carrie Foster's and try to be a hard and a fery to be a hard and try to be a hard carrie foster's and try to be a hard all But my chief delight and the Aunt Carrie Foster's and try to be a good girl, for he would have to be away New York Central and Pennsylvania for a long time, but some day he would were also points of strength. The good for a long time, but some day he would come back and get me and that I must always be his own good little darling daughter. So the next day Aunt Carrie Rumors still circulate of new railroad came to get me and although I cried heart, I think that Uncle Archie is guilty of it all." Annie got no farther, this juncture and asked kindly: "An-nie, dear, why did you never tell us this before? You had no right to keep gan his search for Archie and the lost picture. He worked and worked for reprobate Archie, who had allowed his innocent brother to suffer for him, and at once handed him over to justice. The picture was never recovered, and though Annie's father was a changed and altered man after his long years of toll in the penitentiary, Annie's longed-for dream is fulfilled, as they have their old, delightful studio life back again consideration of this matter of crop history so affected one speculator that he covered a short line of 460,000 bushels. But the others only smiled, and cheerfully sold it to him. The cash business was fair, 150,000 bushels here, 50,000 bushels of it for direct export. New York put the export business at thirty loads, and Philadelphia reported 25 loads. This had a steadying induce, which held to the end. The spread between May and July widened to 15c during the afternoon, and there was considerable "changing." The local crowd sold May and took July, while the elevators, in a moderate way, reversed the action. Primary receipts were 276,000 bushels, compared with 129,000 bushels last year. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 252 cars, against 211 cars a year ago. Local receipts were 42 cars, none of which were contract grade. Clearances in wheat and flour were equal to 177,000 bushels.
